1: Should free music downloads be ban?

With the development of technology, more and more people are making use of the Internet and they are enjoying downloading all types of materials. Some are specially fond of downloading free music, they argue that free music downloads not only enrich our life but also are good for the music industry, because they help increase the popularity of music.

However, from my point of view, it is not advisable to allow free music downloads. For one thing, they violate the intellectual property's right of musicians. For another, they have a negative impact on the sales of musical products, such as CDs, which may do harm to the whole music industry. Without good returns, who would like to invest in the music industry. In order that music industry can develop healthily, we'd better ban free music downloads. Let's all start to do so, with ourselves.

2: On TV shows

Nowadays TV shows are very popular. TV programs like super girls and dreams in China have attracted thousands of people to participate and many more wait to watch them when they are on show.

Why are so many people interested in such programs? Applicants say that these programs provide excellent opportunities for young people to express themselves and to show their speciality. They help them prove their self-confidence and can add to their courage to face all kinds of challenges. However, some people criticize these programs arguing that they are not only a waste of energy, money and time but also a revelation of sociality.

In my opinion, we need not to be too critical about such TV programs. If they can bring happiness to those who participated in them as well as to the audience, they are justifiably entitled to prosper.

3: On Students Dealing In Stocks

When many people make a fortune in the stock market, a great number of university students follow their steps and get involved in dealing in stocks, too. They deal in stocks in their free time, trying to earn some money and gain some experience in managing properties.

Most people accept this understandingly. They say dealing in stocks provides students an opportunity to combine what they've learned in school with practice.

However, there're also people who take a negative view on this. They argue that dealing in stocks will not only take much of the students' energy and time, but it will also make huge economic risks. When huge losses occur, they may lead to disastrous results.

As for me, I think university students must be discouraged to deal in stocks since campus life is not yet ready for the turbulent stock market.

4:Should English Classes Be Compulsory For Students?

Most universities in China have made English a compulsory course which has aroused many complaints among students. Many students wish that English could be removed from the list of compulsory courses.

However, I think it is of great significance for all university students to study English. To begin with, as an international language, English is widely used. Today, university students must master the language if they are to communicate with foreigners and to participate in the fierce international competition in the future. In addition, studying English as a foreign language does not only provides students with the useful tool for communication but also open the door to cultures different from our own. As is universally acknowledged, mutual understanding among different cultures is vital for keeping the world safe and peaceful.

Therefore, I strongly recommend that all students should take advantage of the compulsory course, and try to study English well.

5:Fast Food

Fast food has been increasingly popular in our life. For one thing, more fast food restaurants both Chinese and western style appear in the street. For another, more customers welcome fast food. Several years ago, only the young went to McDonald's. But now people of all ages rush to fast food restaurants.

The popularity of fast food apparently relates to the fast pace of modern life. Office workers have to turn to fast food because of their short lunch time. Some families, with both husband and wife working full time, cannot afford the time to cook. So they choose it, too.

However, evidence shows that fast food lacks nutrition. And if we eat only fast food it is surely bad for health. Therefore, I think, for convenience's sake, we need fast food. But if we want to keep good health, we should try our best to cook for ourselves

6:On Students Quitting School

Many college students have quit school in recent years. They do it for different reasons. Some students quit school because of their poor health. A serious disease or a traffic accident may have made it impossible for them to continue their schooling. Other students may be forced to do it because their family couldn't afford the tuition.

However, there are some students who quit school out of their own choice. Some embrace a good job offer and leave school. Others may find that they cannot afford to lose the the good opportunity to start their own business. So they quit school to start their career just like Bill Gates.

Whatever the reason, I think college students should think twice before deciding to quit school. After all, graduates are normally better prepared for their future than those who quit school. College education pays off in the long run.

7:Should Students Follow Fshions?

Young university students are sentitive to fashions. Some are keen on following fashions. They use mobile phones of the latest style. They wear stylished clothes. They enjoy popular music.

Some people are not happy with this phenomenon. They argue the univeresity students should focus on their studies rather than on fashions. They say fashions cost so much that university students cannot afford them. Some students follow fashions crazily for fear of losing face. Fahions have caused much trouble on campus.

However, others may hold different opinions. They say fashions can drive students to work harder for a better life and broden their horizons, which is essential for their futue development.

I understand those students who follow fashions. But they must be responsible and not go to extremes. If their family is poor, there is no need for them to have such luxurious hobbies

9:Grades and Ability

Do high grades imply excellent ability? Opinions vary from person to person.

Some agree that high grades reflect high intelligence and are thus indicative of one' s ability. Students who do well in exams are therefore always favored in class. Others hold that grades have little to do with one' s ability. They point out that some students who do not well enough in school may also make great achievements. They take Edison for example, saying that Edison was considered not clever by his primary school teacher but became a very famous inventor later.

In my view, grades are important for us students. When people have no other ways to assess ability, they can decide whether we are qualified for school place or position only from our grades.

Therefore, we must try to achieve high grades in school, even though they are not the only standard for our abilities.

10: The chart shows that college students have changed much in their ways of studying in English and their total expenses have also increased greatly. In 2000, they borrowed either reference books or tapes, but in 2008 they can choose their reference books, tapes, CDs, or DVDs, Mp3s on the internet. Consequently, their annual expenses for studying English have risen from 150 yuan to 230 yuan per person, a fifty percent increase.

Many factors contribute to such changes. Firstly, as an international language, English is not only useful when we travel abroad or communicate with foreigners, but also has become a must if we apply for a job in some large companies. Secondly, the income of most families has increased considerably, so college students can spend more on English study. Last but not least, with the advancement of new technology, more efficient English study facilities have become available for students.
