Passage 1

Washington Irving was America's first man of letters to be known internationally. His works were received enthusiastically both in England and in the United States. He was, in fact, one of the most successful writers of his time in the country, and at the same time winning the admiration of fellow writers like Scott in Britain and Poe and Hawthorne in the United States. The respect in which he was held partly owing to the man himself, with his warm friendliness, his good sense, his urbanity, his gay spirits, his artistic integrity, his love of both the Old World and the New. Thackeray described Irving as "a gentleman, who, though himself born in no very high sphere, was most finished, polished, witty; socially the equal of the most refined Europeans." In England he was granted an honorary degree from Oxford—an unusual honor for a citizen of a young, uncultured nation—and he received the medal of the Royal Society of Literature. America made him ambassador to Spain.

Irving's background provides little to explain his literary achievements. A gifted but delicate child, he had little schooling. He studied law, but without zeal, and never did practice seriously. He was immune to his strict Presbyterian home environment, frequenting both social gatherings and the theater.

C. It prompted his interest in law.
D. It had almost no effect on his life.
14. Which of the following best describes the effect of Irving's personal qualities on his literary success?

B. His personal qualities were primarily responsible for his literary success.

Passage 2

Traditionally, universities have carried out two main activities: research and teaching. Many experts would argue that both these activities play a critical role in serving the community. The fundamental question, however, is how does the community want or need to be served?

In recent years universities have been coming under increasing pressure from both the governments and the public to ensure that they do not remain "ivory towers (象牙塔)" of study separated from the realities of everyday life. University teachers have been encouraged, and in some cases constrained (强迫), to provide more courses which produce graduates with the technical skills required for the commercial use. If Aristotle wanted to work in a university in the UK today, he would have a good chance of teaching computer science but would not be so readily employable as a philosopher.

A post-industrial society requires large numbers of computer programmers, engineers, managers and technicians to maintain and develop its economic growth but "man", as the Bible says, "does not live by bread alone." Apart from requiring medical and social services, which do not directly contribute to economic growth, the society should also value and enjoy literature, music and the arts. Because they can also promote economic growth. A successful musical play, for instance, can contribute as much to the Gross National Product through tourist dollars as any other things.

16. The main idea of the first paragraph is that _____.

C. research and teaching are of great importance in universities

B. the governments interfere too much with college education
C. teachers are forced to do what they don't like to do

18. The Aristotle example is used to make the point that _____.
A. universities in the UK have produced too much good for graduates
B. such abstract subjects as philosophy is no longer useful
C. education should serve the social needs
D. it is advisable for today's philosophers to know computer science
19. According to the passage, literature, music and the arts _____.
A. do not contribute to economic growth at all
B. are less useful to the society because they do not make direct contribution to economic growth
C. are similar to medical and social services in their way of promoting economic growth
D. should develop only when they are good for economic growth
20. The author believes that _____.
A. art is useful only when it is made into a money earner
B. the promotion of economic growth is the only goal of today's society
C. universities should not provide literature or art courses
D. the society needs both technical skills and arts

Passage 3

All the useful energy at the surface of the earth comes from the activity of the sun. The sun heats and feeds creatures and mankind. Each year it provides men with two hundred million tons of grain and nearly ten million tons of wood, coal, oil, natural gas, and all other fuels are stored energy from the sun. Some was collected by this season's plants as carbon compounds. Some was stored by plants and trees ages ago. Even waterpower derives from the sun. Water turned into vapor by the sun falls as rain. It courses down the mountains and is converted to electric power. Light transmits only the energy that comes from the sun's outer layer, and much of this energy that is directed towards the earth never arrives. About nine tenths of it is absorbed by the atmosphere of the earth. In fact, the earth itself gets only one half millionth of the sun's entire output of radiant energy.

21. The sun is the source of all of the following EXCEPT _____.
A. gasoline
B. natural gas
C. atomic power
D. animal fat
22. Radiant energy is stored as carbon compounds by _____.
A. plants
B. water
C. rock
D. creatures

23. The sun's energy provides us with all EXCEPT _____.
 A. rain B. teal C. water D. light
24. The largest part of the light energy directed towards the earth is _____.
 A. stored up by the plants
 B. absorbed by the earth's atmosphere
 C. stored up by the animals in the form of body fat
 D. used for electric power
25. Of the sun's total output of radiant energy, the earth receives _____.
 A. one tenth
 B. one millionth
 C. all that comes from the surface of the sun
 D. a very small portion

Passage 4

Television has changed the lifestyle of people in every industrialized country in the world. In the United States, where sociologists have studied the effects, some interesting observations have been made.

Television, although not essential, has become an important part of most people's lives. It alters people's ways of seeing the world; in many ways, it supports and sustains(维持) modern life.

Television has become a baby-sitter, an introducer of conversations, the major transmitter of culture and a keeper of tradition. Yet when what can be seen on TV in one day is critically analyzed, it becomes evident that television is not a teacher but a sustainer; the poor quality of programming does not elevate(提高) people into greater understanding, but rather maintains and encourages the life as it exists.

The primary reason for the lack of quality in American television is related to both the history of TV programming development and the economics of TV. Television in America began with the radio. Radio companies and their sponsors first experimented with television. Therefore, the close relationship which the advertisers had with radio programs became the system for American TV. Sponsors not only paid money for time within programs, but many actually produced the programs. Thus, in American society, television is primarily concerned with reflecting and attracting society rather than experimenting with new ideas. Advertisers want to attract the largest viewing audience possible. To do so requires that the programs be entertaining rather than educational, attractive rather than challenging.

Television in America today remains, to a large extent, with the same organization and standards as it had thirty years ago. The hope for further development and true achievement toward improving society will require a change in the entire system.

26. According to the author, American television is poor in quality because _____.
 A. advertisers are interested in experimenting with new ideas
 B. it is still at an early stage of development, compared with the radio
 C. the programs have to be developed in the interests of the sponsors for economic reasons
 D. it is controlled by radio companies
27. The second paragraph is mainly about _____.
 A. TV as the sustainer of American life

- B. TV as the major transmitter of culture
 C. the educational effect of TV on society
 D. the strong influence and the poor quality of American TV
28. In the author's view American TV should _____.
 A. be critical but entertaining B. be creative and educational
 C. change with the development of society D. attract as many viewers as possible
29. The author believes that television in the United States has become important to most people because _____.
 A. it promotes family unity
 B. it helps them develop their speaking ability
 C. it affects their life in many ways
 D. it challenges society
30. The author's attitude towards American television is _____.

Part IV Translation (15 points)

Directions: Translate the following passage into Chinese and put your translation on the ANSWER SHEET.

No one gets out of this world alive, and few people come through life without at least one serious illness. If we are given a serious diagnosis, it is useful to try to remain free of panic and depression. Panic can constrict the blood vessels and impose an additional burden on the heart. Depression, as medical researchers all the way back to Galen have observed, can set the stage for other illnesses or intensify existing ones. It is no surprise that so many patients who learn that they have cancer or heart disease—or any other catastrophic disease—become worse at the time of diagnosis. The moment they have a label to attach to their symptoms, the illness deepens.
